ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANTS'
MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY
JUDGMENT AS TO CERTAIN
ALLEGED NON-PARTY CO-
CONSPIRATORS

1 Currently before the Court is defendants' motion for partial summary judgment as to certain
 2 alleged non-party co-conspirators. Pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-1(b), the Court finds this matter
 3 suitable for disposition without oral argument and therefore VACATES the hearing currently scheduled
 4 for September 12, 2014. Having considered the parties' papers, and for good cause appearing, the Court
 5 hereby GRANTS IN PART AND DENIES IN PART defendants' motion.

6 7 BACKGROUND

8 During Track 2 discovery, defendants asked plaintiffs to identify every non-defendant
 9 coconspirator on which they based their claims, including the particular evidence supporting plaintiffs'
 10 contentions that each such entity participated in the conspiracy. In response to defendants'
 11 interrogatories, plaintiffs identified more than fifty alleged non-party coconspirators.

12 Defendants move for summary judgment as to all claims based upon purchases made from: (1)
 13 IBM Corp.; (2) IBM Japan, Ltd.; (3) NEC LCD Technologies, Ltd; and (4) Shanghai SVA-NEC Liquid
 14 Crystal Display Co. ("SVA-NEC").¹

16 LEGAL STANDARD

17 Summary judgment is proper "if the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any 18 material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). The 19 moving party bears the initial burden of demonstrating the absence of a genuine issue of material fact.
 20 Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). The moving party, however, has no burden to

 22 ¹Defendants' motion originally sought summary judgment as to claims based on twelve
 23 additional alleged non-party coconspirators. In their opposition, plaintiffs agree that there is insufficient
 24 evidence that Alps Electric, Inc., Seiko Instruments, Inc., TPO Displays Corporation, Acer America
 25 Corporation, Optrex Corporation, Optrex America, and LG Innotek Co. Ltd. participated in the price-
 26 fixing conspiracy. See MDL Master Dkt. No. 9158 at 1, n.1. Accordingly, defendants' motion is 27 GRANTED as to those non-parties. Plaintiffs further agree that there is insufficient evidence to 28 establish that IBM Credit Corporation, NEC Display Solutions of America, Inc., NEC Corporation of America, NEC Electronics America, Inc., and Philips Consumer Electronics participated in the conspiracy. Id. at 2, n.4. However, plaintiffs state that they intend to pursue claims based upon purchases from these entities based upon the ownership or control exception laid out in Royal Printing
Co. v. Kimberly-Clark Corp., 621 F.2d 323 (9th Cir. 1980). Defendants reserve their right to challenge the application of this exception to these entities in a later motion. See MDL Master Dkt. No. 9198 at 1-2. However, for purposes of this motion, the Court GRANTS defendants' motion as to these non-parties as well.

1 disprove matters on which the non-moving party will have the burden of proof at trial. The moving
2 party need only demonstrate to the Court that there is an absence of evidence to support the non-moving
3 party's case. Id. at 325.

4 Once the moving party has met its burden, the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to "set forth,
5 by affidavit or as otherwise provided in Rule 56, 'specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for 6 trial.'" T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Pac. Elec. Contractors Ass'n, 809 F.2d 626, 630 (9th Cir. 1987) (citing
7 Celotex, 477 U.S. at 324). To carry this burden, the non-moving party must "do more than simply show
8 that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts." Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v.
9 Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586 (1986). "The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence . . . will 10 be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the [non-moving 11 party]." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 252 (1986).

12 In deciding a summary judgment motion, the Court must view the evidence in the light most 13 favorable to the non-moving party and draw all justifiable inferences in its favor. Id. at 255.
14 "Credibility determinations, the weighing of the evidence, and the drawing of legitimate inferences from 15 the facts are jury functions, not those of a judge . . . ruling on a motion for summary judgment." Id.
16 However, conclusory, speculative testimony in affidavits and moving papers is insufficient to raise
17 genuine issues of fact and defeat summary judgment. Thornhill Publ'g Co., Inc. v. GTE Corp., 594 F.2d 18 730, 738 (9th Cir. 1979). The evidence the parties present must be admissible. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(2).

19 On summary judgment, an antitrust plaintiff bears the burden of proving that the alleged 20 conspirators in fact entered into an agreement. See Monsanto Co. v. Spray-Rite Serv. Corp., 465 U.S.
21 752, 763 (1984). That burden may be carried either by producing direct evidence that the entity
22 conspired, or circumstantial evidence from which a rational factfinder could conclude that the entity was 23 part of the alleged conspiracy. In re Citric Acid Litig., 191 F.3d 1090, 1093 (9th Cir. 1999). "Direct 24 evidence in a Section 1 conspiracy must be evidence that is explicit and requires no inferences to 25 establish the proposition or conclusion being asserted." Id. (quoting In re Baby Food Antitrust Litig., 26 166 F.3d 112, 118 (3d Cir. 1999)). When an antitrust plaintiff relies upon circumstantial evidence,
27 however, it "must present evidence 'that tends to exclude the possibility' that the alleged conspirators
28 acted independently." Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 588 (1986)

(quoting Monsanto, 465 U.S. at 764).

The Ninth Circuit utilizes a two-part test when an antitrust plaintiff attempts to establish a conspiracy solely with circumstantial evidence. See Citric Acid, 191 F.3d at 1094. A defendant may rebut conspiracy allegations “by showing a plausible and justifiable reason for its conduct that is consistent with proper business practice.” Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). Then the burden shifts to the plaintiff “to provide specific evidence tending to show that the defendant was not engaging in permissible competitive behavior.” Id.

DISCUSSION

Defendants move for summary judgment as to all claims based upon purchases made from: (1) IBM Corp.; (2) IBM Japan, Ltd.; (3) NEC LCD Technologies, Ltd (“NLT”); and (4) SVA-NEC, arguing that there is no direct evidence that any of these entities participated in the alleged conspiracy, and that any circumstantial evidence of their participation does not tend to exclude the possibility that these entities acted independently. The Court shall first address the evidence relevant to the IBM entities, and then the evidence relevant to the NEC entities.

1. IBM Entities.

Defendants adduce the following evidence in support of their burden to show that the IBM entities had “a plausible and justifiable reason for [their] conduct that [was] consistent with proper business practice.” See Citric Acid, 191 F.3d at 1094. First, defendants argue that the 1998 golf course meeting in Taiwan is not evidence of collusive behavior on IBM’s part. Defendants point to deposition testimony to the effect that no agreement was, or could have been, reached during that meeting. See Declaration of John H. Chung (“Chung Decl.”) Ex. 1. Second, defendants contend that a series of email exchanges made in advance of a June 27, 2000 Vendor Conference, which were apparently sent to, among many others, an employee at IBM, do not support an inference of conspiratorial conduct because: (1) there is no evidence the individual to whom the emails were sent had any responsibility for the sale or pricing of LCD panels, and (2) even if some information regarding shipping quantities was exchanged between IBM and some of its competitors, the mere exchange of information is insufficient to support

1 an inference of price-fixing activity. See Wilcox v. First Interstate Bank of Oregon, 815 F.2d 522, 526
2 (9th Cir. 1987) (the exchange of information available from public sources does not support an inference
3 of conspiracy). Defendants support this second issue by pointing to testimony that information
4 regarding forecasted LCD panel production was publicly available and was accessed by defendants in 5 this case. See Chung Decl. Ex. 6. Third, defendants argue that plaintiff's evidence regarding sales to 6 Dell is not probative of IBM's participation in the conspiracy alleged in plaintiffs' complaints. In this 7 regard, defendants point to evidence in the record that would support pro-competitive, rather than anti-
8 competitive behavior, see Plaintiffs' Ex. 45, and also note that plaintiffs claim no damages based on 9 purchases from Dell.

10 The Court finds that defendants have met their burden of demonstrating that plaintiffs' evidence
11 can support the plausible conclusion that IBM was engaged "in permissible competitive behavior." See
12 Citric Acid, 191 F.3d at 1094. Because defendants have demonstrated that the record evidence can 13 support an inference of non-conspiratorial conduct, the burden shifts to plaintiffs to "introduce evidence
14 that tends to overcome defendants' plausible explanation and exclude the possibility of independent 15 conduct by [defendants], such that an inference of collusion is reasonable." See Sun Microsystems Inc.
16 v. Hynix Semiconductor Inc., 608 F. Supp. 2d 1166, 1193 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (emphasis in original).

17 Plaintiffs' evidentiary showing fails at its inception. As defendants correctly note, plaintiffs 18 make no distinction between the two IBM entities it alleges engaged in conspiratorial activity, referring 19 to them both interchangeably as "IBM." Aside from plaintiffs' evidence with respect to the pricing of 20 Dell products – in which plaintiffs refer to the relevant entity as "IBM U.S." – plaintiffs fail to attribute
21 any of their supporting evidence to any individual IBM entity, let alone either IBM Corp., or IBM Japan,
22 Ltd., the two entities plaintiffs still allege engaged in conspiratorial activity. This is a fatal flaw.
23 Lacking information regarding what each alleged conspirator is alleged to have done, the Court cannot 24 evaluate whether either IBM Corp. or IBM Japan, Ltd. ever individually engaged in anti-competitive
25 behavior. Cf. Sun Microsystems, 608 F. Supp. 2d at 1194 (granting summary judgment for defendants 26 where, following extensive discovery, plaintiffs failed to distinguish which company, among several 27 Mitsubishi entities, was responsible for which alleged conspiratorial activity).

28 The Court concludes that plaintiffs have failed to meet their burden to defeat summary judgment,

1 because the Court cannot tell, based upon the evidence plaintiffs have presented, which IBM entity may 2 have been responsible for which acts. Accordingly, the Court GRANTS defendants' motion to the 3 extent it seeks summary judgment of claims based upon the status of IBM Corp. and IBM Japan, Ltd.
4 as co-conspirators.

6 2. NEC Entities.

7 The analysis differs with respect to the NEC entities. Defendants devote less than one page of 8 their motion to arguing that there is insufficient evidence that any NEC entity engaged in the alleged 9 conspiracy. The Court therefore finds that defendants have failed to meet their burden of demonstrating
10 that the NEC entities' conduct could justifiably be found to be consistent with legitimate business 11 practices.

12 Plaintiffs, by contrast, point the Court to several pieces of evidence that tend to support the 13 inference that the NEC entities engaged in the alleged conspiracy. As to NLT, plaintiffs note that, in 14 April, 2003, around the same time NLT was established, Mr. Hidetoshi Usui became a manager at NLT
15 and took over responsibility for information exchanges with Mitsubishi Electric, Hitachi, Ltd., Toshiba
16 Matsushita Display Technology, and Samsung Japan. Pls.' Ex. 56. The following month, Mr. Usui
17 circulated a report documenting a meeting in which LG provided him with confidential pricing and 18 production information. Pls.' Ex. 59. Throughout the remainder of that year, Mr. Usui continued to 19 circulate reports containing confidential information regarding competitors' pricing and production
20 activities. Pls.' Exs. 61-63. These communications continued through 2004 as well. Pls.' Exs. 66-70.
21 The Court finds that this evidence is sufficient to survive summary judgment.

22 As to SVA-NEC, plaintiffs point to evidence that, soon after SVA-NEC was established in 2004,
23 a Sanyo representative arranged a meeting for the purpose of discussing "the supply of panels." Pls.'
24 Ex. 93. In September, 2005, representatives from AUO met with SVA-NEC representatives at SVA-
25 NEC's premises. Pls.' Ex. 94. Minutes from that meeting detail production capacity and pricing
26 information. Id. The following week, AUO circulated an email titled "Market Information from SVA
27 (confidential do not forward)." Pls.' Ex. 95. As with plaintiffs' evidence regarding NLT, the Court
28 finds that plaintiffs' claims with regard to SVA-NEC should survive summary judgment.

1 The Court finds that there is a genuine issue of material fact with respect to NLT and SVA-
2 NEC's participation in the conspiracy, and therefore DENIES defendants' motion for summary
3 judgment as to these two entities.

5 CONCLUSION

6 For the foregoing reasons and for good cause shown, and on the basis of the record before it, the 7 Court hereby GRANTS IN PART AND DENIES IN PART defendants' motion for summary judgment.
8 This Order resolves MDL Master Docket No. 9061.
